“Too many times has the world seen attempts to change boundaries through force. Let us be thankful that here at Chamizal we celebrate an example of how such matters should be settled.”

President Lyndon B. Johnson, October 28, 1967

Establishing the Memorial

The American-Mexican Chamizal Act of 1964 was a milestone in diplomatic relations between Mexico and the United States. Chamizal National Memorial was established to commemorate this treaty which resulted in the peaceful settlement of a century-long boundary dispute between the neighboring countries.

Far more than mere acreage, Chamizal is an idea, a dynamic process, dedicated to furthering the spirit of understanding and goodwill between two nations that share one border. The Memorial provides visitors with ample opportunity to better understand, not only other cultures, but their own cultural roots as well.

Education Theater Programs

The coming months bring a wealth of theater programs for area students and teachers. From marionettes and contemporary opera to Shakespearian presentations and the Golden Age of Spanish theater, the Memorial is committed to providing educational experiences that tell the story of the Chamizal and help link different artistic and cultural expressions to the lives of our visitors.

The Memorial works with different local, regional and international organizations to promote and offer these programs free and almost-free of charge. We invite you to learn more about the Memorial and the National Park Service by participating in these and other types of programming offered by the Chamizal staff.

Pregúntale al Rio

Pregúntale al Rio (Ask the River) recounts the story of the Chamizal dispute using marionettes!

With the help of four memorable characters, the program is designed to familiarize Pre-K through 2nd grade students with the Chamizal story. This interactive puppet program is approximately 40 minutes in length and includes a question and answer session with the puppets at the end of each performance.

Pregúntale al Rio (Ask the River) was developed by La Compañía Teatral de Marionetas Shuto and Memorial staff.

Heart of a Piñata through February 8th

Local artists Javier Aguinaga and Charissa Saenz explore the symbols of faith, hope, and love within the historical and cultural context of the piñata. While the large scale piñata sculptures are a personal extension of Saenz's narrative poetry, they are also strong reflections of the human heart.

Works by John Rust through mid-January

"Living in El Paso, it's easy to take what you see for granted when you see it everyday. Photographic elements from the El Paso region serve as focal points for many of my paintings. Signs, buildings and points of interest blend into the background as we move through everyday life. Often I juxtapose images from popular culture that have a similar feeling as the photograph I am working with."

Sensational Plants

through February 28th

Local artist Janice Walpole offers a fresh and vibrant look at desert plant life found in the borderland. Using brilliant colors, she stylizes leaves and fronds of agave, palms and more.

National parks enrich the lives of many in this country. They provide access to the powerful ideas, values, and meanings ascribed to the cultural, natural and recreational heritage of the United States. However, not all have enjoyed the opportunity to connect with heritage resources to the same extent. By and large, public services in National Parks have served some elements of the U.S. public better than others. This program focuses on the education community and engages teachers from urban areas in under-served schools that may or may not be currently reached with park programs.

TRT @ the Chamizal 2008-2009 Program at a Glance

- Eligible teachers can participate at any NPS site involved with the TRT program. Multiple positions are open in parks throughout Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Arizona and Maine.
- Two positions are available at Chamizal National Memorial.
- TRTs will be compensated at a rate of $300 per week for an eight to ten week period. NPS funds will be obligated to the school district; TRTs will receive compensation directly from their district. In addition, park sites are responsible for providing the TRT with a uniform and housing where applicable.

Summer dates for this program are tentatively June - July 2008.

- TRT participants are required to wear the NPS uniform in the classroom during National Parks Week in April 2009.

- TRTs will develop an Educator Toolkit, which will consist of a set of printed materials based on Chamizal National Memorial and the NPS.
- The TRT will become an essential member of the Interpretation & Education Division at the Memorial. As such, the TRT will be asked to participate in division meetings, contribute to group projects, periodically staff the Visitor Center, and occasionally play a part in special programming.
